It is just one of my personal favorite publications. It is among the most awesome publications I have read. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

Occurs at Kfitz, near Rakonitz, Bohemia, at the formerly worked antimony mines. Named after Professor H. Hoefer of Leoben. Hopeite, p. 808.--Crystals described from Moresnet, Belgium, G. Cesaro, Mem. Acad. Belg., 63, 1897. Humite Group, p. 535.--Analyses on carefully selected material, identified by crystallographic study, have enabled Penfield and Howe (Am. J. Sc., 47, 188, 1894) to establish the following formulas for the three species of the group: These formulas vary progressively by an increase of one molecule of (Mg, SiO₄), and this variation is closely connected with the crystallization (see Miti., p. 534). The vertical axes are in the ratio of 5: 7: 0, that is, of the total number of magnesium atoms present. The same result was reached at nearly the same time by Hj. Sjogren, Bull. G. Inst. Upsala, 2, 39-54, 1894. Penrield and Howe also remarked that another member of the series, having the composition MgMg(P, OH)SiO₄, was to be expected, whose axial ratio should be about 1 086:1:1 887, 0 = 90. This would then give for the vertical axes of the four compounds the ratio of 3: 5: 7: 9. A member of the group having this form was later discovered by Hj. Sjogren and called Proleetite. Though not yet analyzed, its composition is probably expressed by the formula given above. See Proleetite. Cf. also Lewis, Min. Mag., 11, 137, 1896.
